

Refresh, Restore, Renew: Healing Ourselves in a Wounded World

WHO: Women's Center for Healing & Transformation
WHAT: 2022 Women's Conference
WHERE: Northshore Harbor Center, Slidell, LA
WHEN: Saturday, May 7, 2022

Slidell, LA- On Saturday, May 7, 2022, at Northshore Harbor Center, the Women's Center for Healing and Transformation will hold its 1st Annual Women's Conference. The Women's Center has a deep commitment to the future of women's individual and collective empowerment. The feminine wisdom of compassion and equity is vital for the betterment of all humankind. During this covid-19 pandemic, women were impacted the most--from increased domestic duties to less social support (when support was needed the most), more caregiving of children and elders, more hands-on parenting, and income loss. The Women's Center for Healing & Transformation seeks to provide resources, support, connection, networking, and leadership skills to women via a one-day Women's Conference.

The conference is designed to be intergenerational, so women of all ages can learn from each other's experiences and wisdom. The conference participants will network and collaborate, hear from guest speakers, and have a chance for group interaction in break-out sessions led by experts in various health and wellness fields designed to revitalize, restore, and replenish women post-pandemic. We recognize and are excited by the advances being made with the vaccination rollout and the decline in new covid cases. However, we are acutely aware of what is known as secondary trauma. Secondary trauma also referred to as compassion fatigue, is indirect exposure to trauma through a firsthand account or narrative of a traumatic event. Many women are dealing with post-pandemic compassion fatigue. Compassion fatigue may include feelings of isolation, anxiety, dissociation, physical ailments, and sleep disturbances. Additionally, compassion fatigue is associated with a sense of confusion, helplessness, and a greater sense of isolation from support systems than is seen with burnout.

The conference content is rooted in holistic healing, mental health support, self-care, and caregiver support. Over 200 conference participants will be offered a unique opportunity to explore critical issues vital to their work and life balance.
